emsenn

EMSENN: This is emsenn. Remember, today's the last day to get in rent without a late fee.

SAEED: Remember what you out on my door

SAEED: Stop harassing me, I told you I'm dealing with the Chen's period

SAEED: I've spoken with his wife already, do not contact me again

EMSENN: I haven't heard from the Chan's about communicating with you directly. I need to be able to communicate with you to do the job they've hired me to do, and you need to communicate with me as a tenant in this building.

As I understand it, the rental agreement ends at the end of January, but that does not affect the rent due for this month. If the Chan's instruct me otherwise, that can change, but they have not.

SAEED: That's fine I have

SAEED: Now it's the weekend, so again leave me alone

EMSENN: Apologies for texting again, but I've spoken with the Chans, who said they haven't spoken with you, but offered to call you if you need them to explain that I am the property manager and that your communications regarding your rental agreements need to be with me.

Please deposit your rent for January 2019, $685, into the metal box adjacent to Unit 104 by 5:30pm today, to avoid a late fee of $25 being added to the amount due.

SAEED: Until I speak to them again expect nothing. I showed my papers to a lawyer and because of the termination of contract on the first, I owe nothing if expected to leave on the 30th. You still owe me security deposit because it is unrelated to the reason for my dismissal. I will sue you and the bar for discrimination. There is no crime committed. You have not witness any illegal activities, you have called the police and not acted like a manager. Giving due process, you are wrong.

SAEED: I have more resources than you realize.

EMSENN: You're correct that you're owed a security deposit after you vacate the premises, however you are still required to pay rent for this month.

SAEED: You don't speak legalese. What you put on my door is a termination of contract. If I go to court I'll be granted the premises until March. Again be careful EMSENN: As I conveyed in our phone conversation, the agreement allows termination with 30 days written notice without cause. I have not claimed to have witnessed any illegal activities.

As it says, the notice is to inform you of an intent to end the contract in 30 days, which is allowed under the agreement, under the section, "Lease Expiration." I can provide you with another copy if your lease if needed.

I'm not sure what you mean by "be careful."

SAEED: You will lose that is what be careful means. We are done here, have my money by the 29th. Badger me no more and you won't be dragged through another month.

EMSENN: I'm sorry you consider this badgering, but I need to do my part to make it clear that you are required to pay your rent for this month, and will be expected to be moved out by the 30th, at which point you will receive your security deposit, less any fee for damages to the premises, as explained in the rental agreement you made with FJC Trust.

SAEED: Good bye speak to me no further
